About OSPS

Pretrial services are an essential element of an effective criminal justice system, assisting the court in assessing a defendant's background, and if released before trial, supervising the defendant's compliance with court orders while helping to address barriers to success, including housing, employment and treatment.

To ensure such critical services statewide, the Illinois Supreme Court created the Office of Statewide Pretrial Services (OSPS) in 2021 and the General Assembly made it an independent state agency within the Judicial Branch in July of 2025 (725 ILCS 185).

In 2025 OSPS provided services in 83 counties across the state, employing more than 300 pretrial professionals who prepare pretrial investigation reports and supervise individuals released from custody as ordered by the court. OSPS also enforced the Pretrial Services Act and reimbursed the state's other 19 counties for local pretrial services.

Guiding Principles

From the Director

As a steadfast believer in the fundamental principals of our justice system, I'm proud to present OSPS' first Annual Report to the public. OSPS was created just a few short years ago through the vision and leadership of the Illinois Supreme Court and the collaboration of countless pretrial professionals and local stakeholders, each one believing we can do more to keep communities safe and promote pretrial justice.

Upon that foundation, I'm humbled by the progress of our dedicated team in building standards and growing capacity in 2025 as we worked closely with stakeholders to continually improve our work and contributions to the justice system of this state. OSPS will remain committed to our vision, mission and values as we tackle any challenge that may arise.

Our History

The Need

Illinois has required pretrial services in every county since 1987. However, the majority of Illinois counties were unable to launch pretrial programs and the goal remained a work in progress.

Studies show that well-designed pretrial services can improve defendant outcomes and protect the community by monitoring compliance with court orders and connecting defendants to services.

Initial Launch

In 2017, the Illinois Supreme Court created the Commission on Pretrial Practices to study national practices, consult experts, listen to stakeholders at public hearings statewide and review a myriad of reports and data.

Based on recommendations from the Commission's final report, the Supreme Court created OSPS in August of 2021.

Rapid Growth

In 2022, OSPS services launched across the state with an initial 69 counties.

By 2025, OSPS had become a new state agency within the Judicial Branch and gained its 83rd county thanks to broad support.

Our Work

Pretrial Investigations

OSPS gathers the defendant's criminal history and interviews the defendant regarding socio-economic factors to complete a pretrial assessment.

The reports provide important, verified information to inform judges, prosecutors and defense attorneys as the court decides what, if any, supervision rules to impose or, in certain cases, whether to detain.

Pretrial Supervision

When a defendant is ordered to pretrial supervision, OSPS monitors whether they follow court orders and attend hearings.

OSPS also provides court reminders, routine background checks and compliance reports, including required check-ins, drug testing or GPS Monitoring, among other supervision requirements.

Support Services

OSPS aims to improve public safety by addressing barriers to supervision compliance. OSPS provides defendants personal care kits, overdose prevention, transportation assistance and connections to social service referrals that help to increase court attendance and reduce new offenses.

With Partners for Justice, OSPS also supports client advocates embedded within public defender offices in select counties.

Our Values in Action

OSPS' Vision, Mission and Core Values guide our daily work. Below are just a few testimonials on how staff demonstrated our values in 2025.

Justice

OSPS Staff obtained an unsolicited confession regarding an Indiana murder that was undiscovered until reported to authorities. The confession was made by a client during a routine intake interview.

“Staff’s quick thinking helped solve the case!”

Safety

OSPS Staff responded swiftly to a GPS alert where the monitored individual was found tracing at the victim’s residence. Staff stayed on the phone with the victim until police arrived and took the individual into custody.

“Thank you for your dedication and professionalism in handling this very intense situation!”

Collaboration

While in the office for a regular intake, a client experienced a medical emergency and became unresponsive. OSPS staff immediately responded and alerted emergency medical services. OSPS staff performed appropriate medical procedures of sternal rubbing and pulse, respiration and pupil checks until help could arrive.

“They remained calm and composed while working seamlessly together to respond to the situation.”

Pretrial Investigations

OSPS' pretrial investigation reports provide the court, prosecution and defense valuable information as they determine whether a defendant should be released or detained while their criminal case continues. The reports also help inform what supervision supports are needed, if any, if a defendant is released to the community.

For each First Appearance Hearing, OSPS staff provide a thorough and verified criminal history report, including previous failures to appear and active orders of protection. This information is combined with an interview of the defendant to obtain socio-economic information, including family obligations, employment, mental health and substance use. The information is verified with a third party where possible.

OSPS staff then use this information to calculate and provide a score on the widely-used Virginia Pretrial Risk Assessment Instrument (Revised) as well as the Ontario Domestic Assault Risk Assessment, where appropriate.

Supervision

When a defendant is not detained pretrial, courts can order individuals to OSPS supervision, which can include routine check-ins, drug testing, referrals for mental health or substance use disorder treatment, routine criminal background checks and electronic monitoring, among other restrictions. For example, in 2025, OSPS staff oversaw 12,611 drug tests of supervised defendants, as ordered by the court.

Pretrial Services Officers cover every county, meet directly with defendants and attend court hearings. OSPS informs the court, prosecution and defense attorneys about the defendant's compliance with those orders, often times through progress reports and violation reports filed in the case.

The overall caseload for supervision rose 27% between 2024 and 2025, and it is expected to continue to grow in the coming years. Supervised cases discharged in 2025 lasted an average of six months while GPS conditions averaged a little more than four months.

Support Services

OSPS works to lower barriers to a defendant successfully following court orders or attending court, including a lack of housing, unemployment, mental health challenges, lack of transportation or a substance use disorder, among others. OSPS works with the defendant to address those barriers where possible to improve pretrial outcomes as well as community safety.

In 2025, OSPS expanded efforts to provide transportation assistance, now available in 16 counties, to improve court attendance and personal care kits statewide for unhoused defendants. Court date reminders are provided to every defendant for every court date.

While access to mental health or substance use treatment is globally a challenge, OSPS is committed to identifying such partners for defendants and has curated an extensive resource list for all public services on its website for defendants to access at any time.

2025	1,825	5,948	81,122

Client Advocate Program

OSPS also funded 14 advocates within the public defender offices of 10 counties in a partnership with Partners for Justice. These advocates work with public defender clients to address pressing needs such as housing, employment, and healthcare, helping to improve court hearing attendance and client wellness.

Counties include: Adams, Champaign, Effingham, Jackson, Peoria, Saline, Sangamon, White, Will and Williamson.

FY26 Budget

The FY26 budget was approved by the General Assembly in May of 2025 and provides funding for OSPS from July 1, 2025 to June 30, 2026. OSPS' budget, covering comprehensive pretrial services across most of the state, is approved by the Illinois Supreme Court and the Illinois General Assembly.

Nearly 90% of OSPS' $75 million budget goes directly toward providing pretrial services in counties in every region of the state. This includes direct reimbursements for approved pretrial positions in 19 counties ($34 million) as well as salaries for OSPS staff, office space and equipment ($33 million). The OSPS team creates tens of thousands of detailed investigative reports and supervises thousands of defendants across most of the state. The budget covers salaries for more than 700 pretrial professionals statewide.

Pretrial Reimbursements

In addition to providing direct services to the 83 counties OSPS served in 2025, the office also reimbursed approved pretrial salaries in the state's other 19 counties. OSPS is responsible for reimbursing non-OSPS counties for the salaries of approved pretrial positions under the Pretrial Services Act. Pretrial reimbursements for non-OSPS counties comprise nearly half of OSPS' annual budget. The following table details the salary reimbursements for Fiscal Year 2026 approved by the General Assembly in 2025.
